SPAIN

- 4+1 Program, UMW-Instituto Franklin (IF)/University of Alcala, Madrid, Spain. The Teach & Learn in Spain is a 1-year (September-June) graduate program designed for native or near-native English speakers. Through this program, students earn a Master's Degree while gaining experience in a school in the region of Madrid as a Language Assistant. This program implements a hybrid learning model so students can experience life in Spain, complete a language assistantship (with a monthly stipend), while earning a graduate degree in one of the eight (8) tracks offered in the areas of teaching, international education, bilingual and multicultural education, teaching Spanish as a foreign language, school management, global higher education, information and communication technology in education and ESL and bilingual education. Whereas no standardized test is required, applicants are expected to have earned a minimum 3.0 GPA in their undergraduate degree.
- 4+1 Program, UMW-Deusto Business School (DBS), Bilbao and San Sebastian, Basque Country, Spain. Directly following their undergraduate degree, students may earn their Master's in Management (MiM) or Master's in European and International Business Management (EIBM) in approximately a year and a half. These programs are designed to accommodate any undergraduate major/minor and offers several options for language of instruction as well as an international internship period. The EIBM is a tri-lingual program and it includes student mobility to France and the UK. Both programs include professional internships. There is no application fee, and whereas no admissions test is required, candidates must submit a brief personal statement to accompany their academic record and curriculum vitae and undergo an interview with the program director. DBS scholarships are also available to qualifying students.
- 4+2 Program, UMW-University of Deusto, Bilbao, Spain/NOHA Erasmus Mundus Joint Master's Degree Programme in International Humanitarian Action. NOHA Network on Humanitarian Action is an international association of universities that aims to enhance professionalism in the humanitarian sector through education & training, research & publications, and projects. Students can begin their studies by applying directly through the University of Deusto. Students may earn their Master's in International Humanitarian Action through a network of 10 European and 14 global partner universities. This program is designed to equip the future work force with the qualifications to tackle complex humanitarian emergencies due to climate change, food crisis, financial crisis, extreme poverty, urban development, water shortage, energy security, migration and population growth. As a result, there is higher demand for qualified staff who can take on the new humanitarian action challenges, demonstrating proven supervision skills and the capacity to lead. For admissions and inquiries on the NOHA program, contact the NOHA Master's Secretariat. Financial aid is available from each of the partner universities and the Erasmus Commission.
